CLEANING FOR HEALTH

A simple comparison of Two identical homes, with the same number of family members and traffic patterns. One has carpet throughout and the other has tile and wood floors only. With or without the furnace running, which house would you say has better indoor air quality? If you said the house with tile floors, you'd be incorrect. Why? Without the benefit of a carpet to trap the indoor dust and pollutants, they would re-circulate constantly throughout the house. More so if the furnace was operating. All of these circulating pollutants contaminate the breathable air mass.

Sure the tiled house does not have the expense of professional carpet cleaning, but they do have to sweep, vacuum, dust and mop almost daily to keep up with the dust and pollutants constantly circulating through the house.

Studies have revealed that most homes' Indoor Air is more polluted than the outside air. Is yours?

Although no conventional human environment is dust free, having your carpets & upholstery cleaned on a routine and regular basis helps to minimize the amount of dust - and the unhealthy substances it carries - onto your carpets, upholstery, drapes, air ducts, blinds and other surfaces. While vacuuming frequently does help, you still require periodic professional carpet and upholstery cleaning to maintain low volumes of dust and the contaminants contained within it. Just like your furnace filter requires on going maintenance, so do your carpets, upholstery, drapes, blinds, and mattresses.
